Spatial-literacy.org is a gateway to the Spatial Literacy in Teaching (SpLint) Centre of Excellence in Teaching and Learning (CETL), which is a joint initiative of the University of Leicester, University College London and the University of Nottingham. This site is hosted by University College London to provide resources and information on a variety of teaching, research and outreach activities, and to act as a portal to guide best practice across a range of public sector geographic information system (GIS) activities.

SPLINT Fellowships
November 27, 2007
We would like to offer a number of 'Visiting Fellowships' for colleagues from Higher Education Institutions (HEIs) in the UK and overseas who would like to come and work with us and use our facilities.
The Visiting Fellowship Scheme seeks to attract colleagues working in other HEIs in the UK and overseas to come and work with staff in one of the three SPLINT institutions on aspects of spatial literacy/spatial thinking for a specified period of time so that both parties can enhance their expertise.
More information can be found on the Leicester website [here].

Wayne is chavviest name
By EMILY HASSALL
THE most chavvy surnames in Britain are Riddock, Rushford, Brownley, Dinsdale and Parveen, a study reveals.
And they are matched by the first names Wayne, Kayleigh, Toyah, Dwayne and Zowie.
Researchers at University College London rated 26,000 names in order of social status based on income, house value, education and health.
Top came chocolate-making family Cadbury.
The poshest in England's World Cup squad were Frank Lampard and Peter Crouch, whose names put them above 96 per cent of the population.
Wayne Rooney scored in the bottom five per cent.
Posh Spice Victoria Adams was in the top 39 per cent until she wed David Beckham — and moved to the bottom 29 per cent.

Group C : Becoming engaged

Members of this Group often acquire their competence in the use of information technology at work, since many of them are young people working in junior white collar occupations in modern offices. They are keen to become more expert in the use of new technologies and to use them for new applications. Many spend time browsing the Internet but without necessarily making many transactions. Many members of this Group work in large cities and may be starting a life in a house that they own, typically in one of the cheaper inner suburbs. Their use of the Internet at work may be a practice that their employers may be keen to control or reduce.

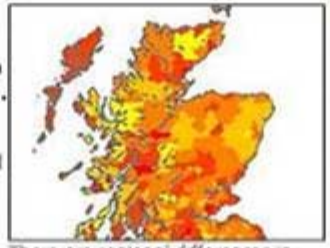
Britain's digital tribes revealed

By Jonathan Fildes
Science and technology reporter, BBC News

Households in Britain can be classified into 23 "e-types" depending on their access to technology, say researchers.



There are regional differences in people's access to technology

E-types include mobile explorers, the e-committed and rational utilitarians.

The researchers, from University College London (UCL), say the profiles could be used to inform future policies on access to digital technology.

Every postcode in Britain has been assigned a classification which people can check online to see if they agree with the researcher's analysis.

"What really emerges is that almost all of the types have some interaction with technology," said Professor Paul Longley, who led the study at UCL. "In a sense we are all digital now"

Time Out London

William Orbit
William Orbit is the soothing electro wizzard who helped re-ignite Madonna's career by producing and co-writing her 'Ray Of Light' album. Orbit's new album 'Hello Waveforms' – the follow-up to 2000's 'Pieces In A Modern Style' – is out on Monday February 20.

What's your favourite city?
You'll think I'm sucking up, but it's London. No question. I've lived abroad, but I'm back now and living in the centre of London. I love it.

Favourite website?
I've discovered one today that tells you where people with the same surname as you live in the UK (spatial-literacy.org/names)

Presumably your real surname isn't Orbit?
No, it's not. But my mum is called Ferrari. So I could've been William Ferrari!
